

SYSTEM FOR IDENTIFYING TRANSPORTED GOODS

ABSTRACT

A system for automatically identifying goods to be transported within a container having an environmental control unit. The system includes a sensor for sensing a code previously assigned to the goods. A processor uses the sensed code to select values of control parameters previously associated with the goods. The selected values are used by the environmental control unit to control the environment within the container.